Remedy for Corn Stalk Disease.

The Chilicothe Tribune says: "Last week Mr. Nooner, a farmer, found two of his horses in a stalk field ill with the corn stalk disease. He hauled them to the barn and administered the 12th. Lots of good things to eat. following remedy: Two ouuces of epsom salts, one quart of raw linseed oil, ten drops Croton oil, dissolved in warm water, all given in one dose. One hour later each of the animals was given a pound of white magnesia in two doses. The horses soon recovered. The recipe was given to Mr. Nooner by the late Dr. Thomas, who practiced veterinary at Rushville for many years.

bottled soft drinks. The other concern will be located on the lot in the rear of Blount & Bust's local option election at Farmington in store, where a galvanized iron building is being put up for it. We understand this factory will be run by a

We wish them both success.

Not So Poor.

Most people have the idea that Washington County is a poor county in the matter of agricultural productivity. In the matter of wheat the average yield runs between 15 and 20 bushels per acre, according to the visitor at this office Tuesday to renew Missouri Crop Review issued by the State Board of Agriculture. This is Mr, and Mrs. F. O. Andes of St. equal to the general average over the Louis were in Potosi Tuesday, on greater part of the state, not excepting that section in the northern part of the state generally regarded as super-Herbert Blount, who is attending for in the fertility of its soil. The school in St. Louis, spent several days highest average in wheat is made by a few counties on the western border, two counties on the northern border and three in the southeast corner, where the average yield of wheat runs from 20 to 25 bushel to the acre. Singularly enough, no county adjoining Washington County, excepting Jefferson, which ranks even, has as high an average wheat yield to the acre. The total yield of wheat in this county in 1914 is given as 169,365 bushels. Other crops rank low, on account of the drouth.
